

香港中文大學
The Chinese University of Hong Kong

International Conference on “Emerging Regionalism: Paradigm Shift of International Relations in East Asia?”

*Free Admission.
All Are Welcome.*

Date: 9 March 2012 (Friday)

Language: In English

Venue: Cho Yiu Conference Hall, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Regionalism is now one of the main features regulating international relations in East Asia. ASEAN, a group of 10 Southeast Asian countries, has demonstrated its importance by contributing to stability and prosperity since its establishment in 1967 and recently China, Korea and Japan have shown more interests in working together and have formed trilateral relationship of addressing various issues of common interests.

The Conference is to review various and on-going activities related to the regional integration, and to look into agendas and plans for future endeavors.

- 9:15 am Panel Session I : How do China, Korea and Japan see the regional integration?
- 11:15 am Panel Session II : ASEAN's experience of regional integration and Community-building
- 1:45 pm Panel Session III : Economic and financial cooperation and the regional integration
- 3:30 pm Panel Session IV : Issues of common concern to be addressed through regional cooperation

Opening Remarks:

Joseph J. Y. SUNG
Vice-Chancellor and President,
The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Registration and Enquiries:

Tel : (852) 39436738 / 39436740
Email : hkiaps@cuhk.edu.hk
Website : www.cuhk.edu.hk/hkiaps

Organized by:
Hong Kong Institute of Asia-Pacific Studies
Department of Japanese Studies