

ABOUT THE EDITORS

Adams B. BODOMO (寶翺潼) is Associate Professor at the Department of Linguistics, the University of Hong Kong. He specializes in theoretical syntax and works mainly within the Lexical-Functional Grammar (LFG) framework. He has done research, and has published extensively, on complex predicates, serial verb constructions, and other verbal phenomena across languages, including Dagaare, Twi, Cantonese, French, Norwegian, and recently, Zhuang. Currently, he is working on a project titled 'Complex Predicates and Serial Verbs across Languages: Issues of Syntax, Semantics, and Information Structure'. His research interests also include IT-based language learning/teaching, issues of language and literacy education in the information age, ICT corpora, and information retrieval. Interested readers are invited to visit his web site at <http://www.hku.hk/linguist/staff/ab.html> or e-mail him at abbodomo@hku.hk for more information about his work.

LUKE Kang-Kwong (陸鏡光) is Senior Lecturer in Linguistics at the University of Hong Kong. His research interests include Chinese and English grammar, Chinese dialects, discourse and conversation analysis, sociolinguistics, and natural language processing. (kkluke@hkusua.hku.hk)